Project Summary : As a Software Developer, I contributed significantly to the Dunblare project in my previous organization. This project involved working with the ASP.NET MVC framework, specifically using .NET 4.0. Dunblare was developed for an import-export company based in the United States and served as a web-based application. The primary purpose of the application was to manage and streamline internal affairs within the organization. My role encompassed various aspects of software development within this context, including coding, testing, and ensuring the effective functionality of the web application.
